

GETTING STARTED WITH RESEARCH CONNECTIONS

Click the links below to access Research Connections!

INFORMATION ON RESEARCH CONNECTIONS

The purpose of Research Connections is to connect Cooper research staff and medical students that would like to inquire about research being conducted at Cooper University Hospital. Research Connections has many resources including an interactive communication feed (Research Opportunities), Resources and Education and Training.

Research Opportunities:

Is an active feed where researchers and medical students can create interactive posts to discuss research interests and opportunities.

- How to Use the Research Opportunities tab

- To create posts to engage with the entire research community, go to the Research Opportunities tab and locate the activity box at the top of the page.
 - After a post is created, all users can engage and comment on the post.
- To communicate with a group of specific Research Connections users hover over the research opportunities tab and select groups, from here you can join, view or create a group.

Education and Training:

This tab highlights education and training that is provided throughout Cooper University Hospital regarding research. Recordings of educations and trainings may be offered along with information on how to join future sessions.

Resources:

The resource tab allows users to gain knowledge of how to get started with research at Cooper University Hospital. Resources include how to get started with Cooper's Human Research Protection Program (HRPP) and Institutional Review board (IRB), grant opportunities, writing publications, and much more!